Sport and physical activity plays a major role in the overall experience and day-to-day lives of many students at Oxford. Getting involved, at any level, is a great way to get out and about, meet new people, stay fit and contribute to your overall wellbeing.

“We know that sometimes when you’re struggling with some tutorial work, leaving the library seems like the worst idea, but in our experience, having that time scheduled for an activity helps to focus the mind, provides a stable routine, and can make you more productive either side of that break. Getting active can give you the break needed from academic work, with a physical and mental release that only exercise can really give.

“Taking part in sport or physical activity helps you stay fit, motivated and can help you to develop soft skills that employers love. We can’t recommend it enough!

“This guide gives you lots of advice, hints and tips on where to start. Whether it’s playing for a sports team, joining a club, a casual session in the park or simply walking around the city.

“It’s part of a campaign called Active at Oxford, which is all about getting out there and enjoying the many benefits that an active lifestyle can bring.

“Even taking small steps to be more active can have massive benefits in the long term.”
“Sport has played a notable role in Oxford’s history, and it remains an important part of many student’s lives today.

“There are huge benefits to sport and physical activity, with some fantastic clubs and opportunities across the University for students.

“There is always a way to balance sports with studying, and we actively encourage students to get active while they are here.”

Why sport works for me - a student’s view

“Doing sport is great way to keep fit and make new friends. From one-off intercollegiate competitions (‘Cuppers’) to college and University sports clubs, there are plenty of opportunities to get involved.

“With the Lifesaving Club, I have competed across the country and feel like I am part of a community outside the Oxford bubble. If you want to try a sport you’ve never done before, go for it!”

Getting the balance right

Sport and physical activity can have a positive impact on how you feel, as well as your physical health. Here are five tips to help you balance exercise and study:

1. Talk to your tutors - good communication can solve many potential issues
2. Get enough sleep - if you’re up early training, you need to ensure you’re going to bed early enough to perform to your best ability when studying
3. Prioritise - you are ultimately responsible for prioritising appropriately, so remember that you may have to make sacrifices along the way
4. Be organised - avoiding distractions while studying, and planning out your time, can help ensure you’re making the most of your days
5. Ask for help - balancing multiple commitments is a challenge, but you can always ask for help from your tutor, academic office, or welfare team

The Oxford Students website includes information and advice about studying and welfare support. Go to: ox.ac.uk/students

Making active choices

You don’t need to be a gym addict to enjoy the benefits of getting active. Making small, positive lifestyle choices can have a huge impact on your wellbeing. Oxford is a beautiful city - so get out and enjoy it.

- Walk to tutorials to enjoy the fresh air and parks.
- Cycling is a quick, healthy way to get around the city.
- Get active and make new friends at a fitness class.
- A run can clear your head during stressful periods.
The Active at Oxford Programme brings together some of the social sport opportunities here at Oxford. We have a range of sports on offer for students, staff and community members.

- Come when you want: no commitment to regular sessions
- Join at any time through the year
- Take part without a trial
- Make new friends (and bring your friends along!)

Pick a session from one of three categories:

SIMPLY ACTIVE
- Beginner-friendly
- Open to everyone
- Team and individual sports on offer

ACTIVE IMPROVER
- Develop your skills

Health and fitness

You don’t have to take up competitive sport to enjoy the benefits of being active. Many colleges have their own gym facilities. Or head to the Iffley Road Sports Centre, which offers all kinds of health and fitness facilities.

Gym
Oxford’s main sports centre has been recently redeveloped. It offers facilities for indoor sports as well as a fully equipped gym.

Rosenblatt Pool
With eight lanes, this 25 metre pool is a great place to get a full body workout. Swimming classes are also available.

Running Track
The home of the Four-Minute-Mile is a historic track and students can run on it for free. Beat your best time in a distraction-free setting.

Fitness Classes
There are a wide range of fitness classes available for all interests. Get active and make some new friends at the same time.
